The Silent Organ.

BY RAVEN.

How often its notes when with harmony swelling,
Elated our thoughts, as we joined in the song,
When deep from our hearts pure devotion was welling,
Enchanted, we loved the sweet strains to prolong.

Far, far from the earth our best hopes were uplifted,
Our bright expectations when life's dream is o'er,
Borne on the sweet current by faith we were drifted,
'Till caught we, a glimpse of the Heavenly shore.

But now in dead silence its keys lie neglected,
Like Israel's harps as they hung on the trees,
When Israel's sorrow alone was reflected,
In low, wailing murmurs that sighed in the breeze.

So, noteless our Organ awakes retrospection,
We think of the seasons now over and gone,
And sorrow is mixed with the sweet recollection,
Of pleasures so great that have ended so soon.

For she who the numbers so oft did awaken,
And led the young choir so kindly along,
Away from the Sunday school circle is taken,
And we're left alone with the Sunday school song.

We meet, and proceed to our usual devotions,
Our hearts in the silence of memory throb,
We try to, but cannot, suppress our emotions,
Our liveliest choruses end in a sob.

But she whom we mourn for, in joy may bestriking
A beautiful harp on the Heavenly shore,
It may be an instrument more to her liking,
An Organ whose keys shall be silent no more.

STILLWATER, Jan. 5, 1872.

WITHOUT HEART.

One evening in the autumn, Coralie Baronne de St. Ange sat in the drawing room of her villa at St. Cloud, surrounded by her usual circle of friends of long years, and all accustomed to meet every evening.

Neither Madame de St. Ange nor her friends however, were old; and although she was a widow, Mme. de St. Ange was not a day over twenty-five, and had made up her mind to remain a widow all her life.

She was rich and possessed of every attraction to insure her a brilliant position in society, but she was, so far as a woman can be, utterly devoid of vanity. She preferred to be loved, to be respected by those around her, who thoroughly understood and appreciated her, rather than to be admired by a thousand people incapable of understanding her, and who would have forgotten her as soon as she had ceased to amuse them.

The greater part of the year she lived at St. Cloud—three months was all she gave to Paris. Year after year the same circle of friends drew around her, spending week after week beneath her roof. But the circle was often enlivened by visitors from Paris, fifteen minutes of railroad being all that divides the capital from St. Cloud.

This evening Mme. de St. Ange was expecting a guest from Paris, and all were just saying, "Monsieur de Montmedy will not come," when M. de Montmedy was announced.

"Do not ask me why I am late, but rather wonder how it is that I am here at all."

"Why, what has happened?"

"I have been knocked down."

"Knocked down?"

"Yes, and by a woman."

"A woman?"

"Yes, a woman, who fell from a third story window first on my head and then on the pavement, where the mangled body lay very still, all crushed and bleeding."

"Good heavens! An accident or a suicide?"

"I know not; all I know is that when I rose I was so overpowered with horror that I was obliged to lean for support on the two people nearest to me, and that nothing but a glass of stiff brandy restored me to my senses. Then I beheld another sight that almost turned my blood."

"What could be more horrible than what you had seen?"

"When what I have told you occurred, I was with a friend of mine, one of the handsomest and most fascinating men I ever knew. I looked round for him and beheld him with the bleeding disfigured corpse in his arms, carrying it into the nearest druggist's; he laid it on the counter, gazed at it for an instant, then having washed his hands, he turned to the looking glass to see that there were no stains on him, and taking my arm went on calmly with the conversation this accident had interrupted. He was not even a shade paler than before."

"I, who am a surgeon," said one of Mme. de St. Ange's guests, "could not have done this."

"And I," exclaimed General Simonet, "who have seen men on the battle field lying dead by the hundreds, could not have looked on such a sight as this unmoved."

"I wouldn't have seen such a thing for ten thousand francs," said M. Canilac, who, being a millionaire, valued every emotion in specie.

"I should like to see your friend," said Mme. de St. Ange, tranquil, "for to tell the truth I think he is a clever humbug."

"Not at all; there was no action, no ostentation."

"Is he young?"

"Twenty-three."

"Is he rich?"

"Very."

"Is he handsome?"

"Ladies and gentleman," said M. de Montmedy, laughing, "all your questions will soon be answered, for I have asked the Count de St. Floy, taking advantage of a general permission given me by Mme. la Baronne, to come here this evening."

"Delightful!" exclaimed the Baronne, "we will put his insensibility to the test."

"And we will conquer it, I will wager anything."

"I think not," said M. de Montmedy; at this moment the servant, opening the door, announced M. de St. Floy.

Under the shadow of this name a tall, handsome and most distinguished-looking man advanced into the room with the easy grace of a man of the world, but without either conceit or presumption in his manner.

All were prepossessed in his favor, but all were anxious to put to the proof the indifference of which they had been told.

Mme. de St. Ange soon found an opportunity of referring to it.

"I am sorry for the terrible accident you and M. de Montmedy witnessed to-day."

"Are you, Madame?"

"Yes; did it make you shudder?"

"Why should it? I do not know the woman. All I could do was what I did, to get her out of the way of public curiosity. As for feeling horror at the sight of blood and broken bones, that is a vulgar emotion; people shrink from the physical horror who have not one tear to give to a lacerated heart or an agony of the mind that is racking the brain to madness. This I look on as folly."

"You have extraordinary strength of mind."

"No, but I feel only as my reason dictates."

"Is not that what the world would call selfishness?"

"No doubt. But selfishness is the most harmless of all vices."

"Not so, for it injures all those whom otherwise we might succor or console."

"If it were a pleasure to console or to succor I should do so for in so doing it, I should satisfy myself. Ah, Madame, we talk a great deal about devotion and disinterestedness; there is no such thing; even the strongest passion of our nature, love, is the most selfish. Love requires entire possession. Say to a man of the most generous nature, your friend cannot recover from his illness unless you give him up the woman you love, and the generous man will let his friend die. Say to a woman, your lover cannot exist unless you give him up to another woman with whom he is in love, and she will answer, I would rather see him dead than another's."

"Then you do not believe in love?"

"I believe in no emotions; I believe in insensibility."

"And are you happy?"

"Perfectly."

Monsieur de St. Floy was so agreeable a companion, accomplished, witty, and so exceedingly good tempered, that it was impossible ever to get angry with him. Nevertheless, this very amiability and apathy, added to the strange principles he had professed, had produced a sort of irritation against him, and a plot had been formed and wagers laid as to who should first rouse him from his insensibility.

Mme. de St. Ange, it was agreed, should first try the power he had acknowledged to be the greatest, the power of love, and for this she used every art which a Parisienne possesses instinctively, but which, until now, Mme. de St. Ange had disdained. She was prepared even to go beyond the bounds of coquetry, secure as she was in the protection of all around her.

She succeeded at last in drawing the Count into what might have been considered a flirtation. It was evening—they were on the terrace—the Count, if not tender, had at least grown poetical, and gradually Mme. de St. Ange allowed her love to be evident, till both sunk into that silence which is love's eloquence. Finding it but little beyond the usual limits, Mme. de St. Ange laid her head on her lover's shoulder, and breathed his name in low and loving accents; but there was no answer, for the Chevalier de St. Floy was fast asleep.

"My dear friends," exclaimed Mme. de St. Ange, entering the lighted drawing-room, where all were assembled, "I have lost my wager; I leave him now in your hands—you can try your skill."

When, after a few minutes, the Count entered the drawing room apparently unconscious of the rudeness he had been guilty of, the gentlemen were at cards, and immediately proposed to the Count to join them.

"If it is agreeable to you; for myself it makes no difference."

"What stakes?"

"Exactly what you like."

M. Canilac, who was very fond of showing off his riches, challenged the Count to ecarte.

They played on for some time, at last Mme. de St. Ange, leaning over his shoulder, inquired whether he was losing or winning.

"I really don't know," said de Floy, with the utmost indifference.

"The Count wins twelve thousand francs."

"Really I am sorry. Suppose we play double or quits, eh?"

"As you please."

The banker, of course, would not give in; but the sum was considerable, and the emotion was visible on his features. As for the Count, he preserved the same smiling countenance, turning the cards carelessly, almost mechanically over.

"You have won!" exclaimed the banker, trying to hide his quivering lips.

"Then we will talk of something else," said de Floy, turning from the card-table.

But suddenly General Simonet came forward, and taking up the cards, threw them into the Count's face.

"Canilac," said the General, "you have not lost your money. The Count cheats you at cards, for I have been watching him, and he has not fairly won."

"General," exclaimed the Baronne, "are you mad? Count, I beseech you, keep calm."

"My dear madam, I am never anything else. I am only sorry that some of the cards struck you. So, General, you really think I cheat?"

"Most decidedly; and if you are insulted, I am ready to give you every satisfaction."

"That means because you have taken a fancy to call me a cheat, I must risk my life by fighting a duel with you?"

"Precisely."

"Well, as you please; it is perfectly indifferent to me; I leave it all in your hands; and now I will retire, for I really am weary; I even believe I went asleep on the terrace. Good-night to you all."

And smiling and humming a tune, the Count with his usual ease and elegance, left the room.

"Well, I never saw anything to equal this man," said Mme. de St. Ange; "but, General, I think you went a little too far."

"You understand, of course, that it was a mere trial. Now I will try him with a duel. If he stands fire as he stands every thing else, I shall say that he is not human. I shall tell him that the arrangements are five paces, with one pistol loaded and the other not, and chance to decide the one who gets the deadly weapon; if he agrees to these terms he is the bravest man I ever saw, and I will apologize to him and hold him in my esteem."

"I cannot help pitying him," said Coralie with a sigh, for de Floy was very handsome, and in all but his lack of sensibility, very fascinating.

As had been foreseen, the Count made no objection to the duel as the seconds had arranged it.

He chose the pistol from the two offered him with a courteous smile, and then at the signal fired. He had chosen the pistol that was not loaded.

"Ah!" said he, "you have the best of it, General."

The General, who at five paces almost touched the face of his adversary, desired him to close his eyes, as he could not take proper aim.

The Count obeyed, but not a muscle of his face moved; and after the General had fired the pistol he opened his eyes and smilingly said:

"You are a bad shot, General."

"Let me feel your pulse," said the doctor. "By Jove! it is slower than mine. Well, you are a mystery."

The Count merely smiled.

"Let me apologize and explain," said the General. "The insult and the duel were alike the result of a wager; we have all lost; it is impossible to make you feel emotions of any kind."

"Yes," said Mme. de St. Ange, advancing, "you are a man of marble."

"No, madame," said the Count; "but as you are all so deeply interested, I will tell you what I am—a man without a heart."

"We know that."

"Not figuratively," said the chevalier, "but literally."

"Bah!" said the doctor, "you could not live an hour."

"My heart was taken out of my bosom six years ago. I was suffering deeply, oh! so deeply, and the physician, as a remedy to save me, took my heart out of my bosom. See, here is the scar."

The Count opened the bosom of his shirt, and the doctor saw a scar in the region of the heart.

"Still," said the doctor, "you could not live; the thing is impossible."

"Not at all, since I live. The doctor took away my heart in a silver box, and I have never felt either pleasure or sorrow since."

The doctor for some minutes looked intently at the Count. Then he took Mme. de St. Ange by the arm and led her aside.

"I have discovered his secret. He is mad."

"Mad, of course mad; on one point a monomaniac; perfectly sane on every point but this, but utterly insane on this point."

"Can he be cured?"

"Yes, if you could persuade him that his heart was once more in his body."

"I think I could," said the Baronne.

For some days the party at the chateau went on as usual, the only difference being that Mme. de St. Ange was more frequently in the society of the Count than she had been before, and that he seemed to get accustomed to her and to miss her if she was long out of his sight. Still not one word of love did he pronounce.

At length Mme. de St. Ange being alone with him, took his hand, and in a low, trembling voice addressed him:

"Count," said she, "I have a confession to make to you."

"To me?"

"Yes; you know your heart was taken from you?"

"Yes."

"Well, do you know what was done with it?"

"No."

"It was given to me; it was placed in my bosom; do you not feel the quick, loud beating? It is the beating of two hearts united in one."

"Then this is why I seem to desire your society. My heart! my heart!" exclaimed St. Floy; "to think that I should have found it again. What must life be with a heart? I have almost forgotten the sensation."

"It is love; it is happiness; it is the revelation of God on earth. Ah! Count, I who feel with two hearts, I have found the world a paradise. Would you not like to feel once again, to know the variations of the soul, like the sound of different harmonies, bringing pleasures of all kinds; sensations, emotions—"

"Ah! would that I could feel."

"I will restore your heart, and mine will ever beat in sympathy with yours as long as we both shall live. The doctor shall take the heart from my bosom and restore it to yours."

The doctor, when let into the confidence of the Baronne, was delighted with the experiment. The Count was persuaded to submit to the operation, and laid on his bed, and the doctor then applied the scalpel slightly to the skin. "Here," said he, "in this silver box is your heart. Now, are you ready! Prepare once more to live. Now, do you feel it? It is once more in your bosom."

The Count heaved a deep sigh and grew suddenly deathly pale. Mme. de St. Ange, who was watching him from behind the curtains, rushed towards him.

"Ignace!" she exclaimed; but the Count merely turned to her with a look of sadness; a look full of love, and placing his hand on his new-found heart, exclaimed; "Too much! too much!" sunk back on his pillow and expired.

"What does this mean?" exclaimed Mme. de St. Ange.

"It means," said the doctor, "that, besides being mad, the Count had a disease of the heart, which probably suggested his madness. The first great emotion he has felt, that is, the first sane thought he has had, killed him."

Mme. de St. Ange kneeled down by the bedside. The Count had taken with him the only love of her life. A few months later a strange superstitious feeling came over her. She would pause suddenly, as though listening for some voice she alone could hear; then placing her hand on her heart, look eagerly around, till at last one day she fell back on the sofa where she was sitting, and clasping the doctor's hand as he sat near her, "Doctor," she exclaimed, "it is impossible to live without a heart!"

"She is dead," exclaimed the doctor.

What He Died Of.

The coroner's jury was summoned the other day in a Texas town to sit upon a man who died suddenly in his bed. The jury proceeded to the house, looked at the corpse, and began the inquest. The doctor explained the case to them, and drew a map of the man's interior, so as as to show the jurymen how a whole lot of Latin things inside of him there got mixed up somehow with a parcel of other classical machinery, and produced a perfectly terrific combination with another Latin title, which killed him, of course. The jury said the case was perfectly plain.—Such an accident as that among the man's internal Latin must have destroyed any one. The only wonder was that he lived an hour. So a verdict was brought in of "death in accordance with the evidence." Just as the inquest ended the man awoke, and the fact was discovered that the deceased person was in the adjoining room, while this wretch had only been asleep. The question that puzzles the coroner now is: What to do with the sleeper? To our mind it will admit of an easy solution. If that man has been found dead by a jury of his countrymen, he is dead, no matter what he thinks about it, or what the apparent facts are. There is nothing in the Constitution of the United States or in Washington's farewell address to forbid his burial; and if we were that coroner we would grab him and plant him at once in the cemetery beneath the greenwood-tree, and sue his relations for the fees.

A "Barbarous" Joke.

A fireman in Philadelphia went into a barber shop to get shaved, and finding the barber out, he concluded to have a little fun before his return. So he took off his coat, put on a thinner one, and quietly waited for a customer. An old gentleman came in soon. "Have a shave sir?" said our impromptu barber. The old gentleman took a chair, and our artist began to lather, expecting every moment the barber would appear.—Five minutes passed, and no barber. Ten minutes; no barber. Now the old gentleman felt pretty well lathered Five minutes more; the old gentleman's face fast disappearing in a small sea of white foam. Five minutes more. Still no barber. The fireman is getting desperate, and conceives a bright idea. Putting up his brush he quietly changes his coat again, takes his hat, and is about to quietly slip out behind the old gentleman's back, when he turns his head and exclaims:

"Here, sir, ain't you going to shave me?"

"No, sir," promptly replies our sloping friend, "the fact is, we only lather here, sir; they shave four doors below!"

HERE is something reliable and fresh from an eye witness of the incident. Shortly after Horace Greeley had registered his name at the Head House, Nashua (whither the great philosopher's lecturing tour took him this fall) a rather aged countryman came into the office and after examining the register asked if Dr. B—— were in.

"There is no such person here," said the gentlemanly clerk.

"No such person here!" echoed the venerable rustic, taking off his spectacles and gazing into the face of the clerk with much incredulity and astonishment.

"No such person here," firmly re-echoed the clerk.

"Young man," exclaimed the other with a solemn expression of countenance; "young man, don't lie to me. It won't do. You can't fool old Gill Parks. Dr. B——'s been here, as sure as guns, and pretty drunk, too, I reckon, for he's left one of them air Latin prescriptions of his on the register!"

And the doctor's friend gazed down at Horace's improved Arabic with a look of triumphant recognition.

AN old farmer was out one fine day, looking over his broad acres, with an axe on his shoulder and a little dog at his heels. They espied a woodchuck. The dog gave chase and drove him into a stone wall, where action immediately commenced. The dog would draw the woodchuck partly out from the wall, and the woodchuck would take the dog back. The farmer's sympathy getting high on the side of the dog, he thought he must help him. So putting himself in position, with axe above the dog, he waited for the extraction of the woodchuck, when he would cut him down. So on an opportunity offered, and the old man struck, but the woodchuck gathering up at the same time, took the dog in far enough to receive the blow, and the dog was killed on the spot. Forty years afterward, the old man, in relating the story, would always add; 'And that dog don't know to this day but what the woodchuck killed him.'

To attract customers, Fume has put up an electric clock in his shop, and is terribly annoyed by boys running in to inquire the time of day. The other evening, as we were buying a cigar, a little shaver came in with the usual: "Please, sir, tell me what time it is?" "Why, I told you the time not a minute ago," said the astonished tobacconist. "Yes, sir," replied the lad, "but this is for another woman."

Near the bed on which the sick man lay was a table, and on the table a large bowl, and in the bowl was milk, but strongly flavored with whiskey. "What have you here?" said the doctor. The Late Elections.

The riotous and disgraceful proceedings which attended the nomination of Henry W. Gray, for Senator from the Fourth District, were reproduced on a larger scale in the election of Tuesday last. Gangs of roughs and repeaters held full sway and rows and rioting were the rule. The police were in most cases participants or leaders of these riots and were to be seen in full uniform drunk and fighting furiously. Hundreds of illegal votes were polled and the election was a perfect farce. In one precinct the ballot boxes were utterly destroyed. Gray's majority is said to be 887. Col. McClure has announced his intention of contesting Gray's seat. A fine commentary this on the "High Moral Ideas" which are said to govern this Republican party.

Grant as a Defaulter.

Grant having acknowledged himself to be a defaulter to the Government, by giving his check for $5000 in payment of the claim against him, the question now arises as to whether he will pay the interest on this sum, which amounts to $6000 or so, the interest exceeding the principal. For some twenty years this indebtedness has stood on the books of the War Department and at last the $5000 is paid but the interest is not. If Grant is desirous of reform here is a fine opportunity to convince people that he is in earnest. If a poor man was indebted to the Government there would be but little doubt as to his being required to pay interest, and there is no reason why so rich a man, as Grant, should be relieved from this obligation. The wealth which he has acquired has been bestowed upon him by admiring friends and devoted office seekers and as it has cost him nothing to acquire he should be willing to part with a small amount to settle his accounts. Grant is an expensive luxury but the people are not anxious to increase his costliness by paying the interest of his debts.

John Cessna.

It is with the keenest sense of pleasure we learn that the House Committee on Elections have denied a seat in Congress to this obnoxious demagogue. A renegade Democrat, who left the party when it ceased to hold power, he was just the man needed for the Republicans; one who was possessed of effrontery enough to advocate any scheme for partisan purposes. We do earnestly trust that hereafter he may be allowed to remain in obscurity. He is one of a class of third rate political hacks with whose services the country can very well dispense, and whose absence from legislative bodies can but result in benefit to the country.

THE N. Y. Tribune speaking of the Custom House Investigations, says that one of its reporters has collected, from various merchants, bills rendered by Leet & Co., compared them with others of the bonded warehousemen, and establishes that the General Order favorites have charged in some instances 250 and 300 per cent more than they had any right to demand. The statements are made on the authority in every instance of the members of the firms or their authorized clerks, who are ready to establish them on oath and by documents.

And further remarks, that if the disgraceful General Order business at that port is not doomed to be swept away out of existence, then there is no virtue in investigations. The proceedings before the Senate Committee on Custom-House abuses, recently, will convince every candid man that a shameful, outrageous, and scandalous imposition has been practiced upon the business community ever since Col. Leet's company has had the General Order business.

THE late James Fisk, Jr. was a remarkably good judge of men and to his ability in this way may be attributed much of the success which he attained and the power which he possessed. In speaking of General Grant's contribution to the fund of General Rawlings, the late Secretary of War, which was paid by Fisk and Gould.

Fisk once said "Grant is not only a greedy little wretch, but he's a fool. He don't know anything; he hasn't brains enough to comprehend the position in which such a thing places him before the country. All that he can see in the matter is that he saved a thousand dollars by it; he is too destitute of sensibility to comprehend what to say about the subscription being a sacred offering upon the altar of friendship. He is incapable of true friendship, and never felt any of the sentiments which true friendship inspires. To sum him up in one sentence, he is the national hog."

How Little, !

The smallest act of the small President who now rules America has just been committed. General Halleck, in charge of the Department of the West, is dead. To succeed him, no one is eligible but General Hancock, than whom a braver or more worthy soldier does not live. But General Hancock does not admire the receiver of goods or the fancier of bull-pups, and is above concealing the fact. Hence, to vent a personal spite, the little fellow in the Presidential chair has recourse to a new expedient. He simply abolishes the department. This, we take it, is the meanest act of petty personal spite in interference with public duty that has yet come to light. If the department was not necessary, why was it kept up, at such great expense, under General Halleck? Was it merely to provide that officer with a semblance of duty? If it was so necessary then, how can it be dispensed with now without detriment to the public service? Will some of Mr. Grant's admirers please answer.—Elkton Democrat.

MR. JENCKES of Rhode Island, a Radical, in the last Congress, said that "one hundred millions is lost annually by rascality and incompetency, and goes into the pocket of corrupt officials and their confederates, and that of every dollar appropriated for the benefit of the Indians, only twenty cents were received by them; that the amount of thieving from year to year would buy up the national debt before it is due."

LEGISLATURE.

IN the Senate on Wednesday of last week the following new bill was introduced.

A petition to prevent the pass book and order system in payment of wages and labor.

Mr. White introduced the following joint resolution:

Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. That each and every soldier who served in the late war, and was at any time under the fire of the enemy, shall be presented with a badge of iron or bronze; that any person or persons found manufacturing, selling, or wearing any such badge, not properly issued, or any counterfeit of the same, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and imprisoned for not exceeding one year, or fined not exceeding five hundred dollars.

In the House Mr. Sanner offered a resolution to print three thousand skeleton maps of the State, showing the political sub-divisions, &c. Adopted.

Mr. Lane, of Huntingdon, offered a resolution instructing the committee already appointed to locate the Gettysburg picture to have the same placed in the Capitol for safe keeping.

Mr. Brockway, of Columbia, moved to refer this resolution to the committee. Agreed to-yeas 59, nays 33.

The following bills were reported favorably:

Providing for a triennial enumeration of children of a suitable age to attend school.

Relative to the evils resulting from the sale of intoxicating liquors. [This is the Illinois law, making the vendor liable for consequential damages.]

Mr. Hancock introduced the following act:

That from and after the passage of this act no mortgage shall be valid against liens for labor performed or materials furnished for more than the value of said property at the time said mortgage was created.

In the Senate on Thursday of last week no business of general interest was transacted.

In the House a bill was passed authorizing the State Supt. of public schools to appoint three citizens, to act as trustees in the State in each Normal School of the State. The bill prohibiting the sale or gift of intoxicating liquor on election days was passed by a vote of 68 to 21.

The following was passed unanimously, and without debate:

Joint resolution instructing our senators and requesting our representatives in Congress to vote for and urge the passage of a bill granting bounty lands to certain persons engaged in the military and naval service of the United States, from and after the fourth day of March, A. D. 1861, introduced into the United States house of representatives by the Hon. L. D. Shoemaker, of Pennsylvania.

In the Senate on Friday last a bill was passed giving Courts of Common Pleas power and authority to grant charters of incorporation to water and gas companies.

In the House Mr. Brockway offered petitions from citizens of Benton and Fishing Creek townships to prevent the running at large of swine.

Mr. Gatchell offered the following:

Resolved (if the senate concur), That when the house adjourns, it adjourns to meet on January 31, at half past ten o'clock.

Mr. Meek raised the point of order that under the rules the resolution will have to lie over one day, being concurrent.

The speaker having sustained the point of order, the words "if the senate concur" were stricken out.

Mr. Brockway then raised the point of order that the resolution was contrary to the clause of the constitution which says that neither house can adjourn more than three days at any one time without the concurrence of the other.

The speaker ruled that the adjournment would be only three days under the resolution, Sunday not being a legislative day.

Messrs. White and Brockway appealed from the decision of the chair, and the question, Shall the decision of the chair stand as the judgment of the house? was carried by a vote of 69 to 19. The resolutions was then adopted by a vote of 51 to 38.

Mr. Woolever raised the point of order that it required a two-thirds vote, in that the resolution changes the rules of the house in relation to the days and hours of meeting.

The point of order was overruled, and the resolution declared agreed to.

The following bill was introduced: a bill entitled a further supplement to the act directing the entry of liens for the principal and interest due the commonwealth for lands held by virtue of location or other office titles, approved 20th of May, 1864.

In the Senate on Monday the opportionment bill was passed by a vote of 33 to 19.

Nothing of public interest was done in the House.

In the Senate on Tuesday the Committee on Finances reported through Mr. Strang the amount of the bills for refitting the halls; the aggregate being $390,468.

An act was passed allowing Courts of Common Pleas to grant charters of incorporation to associations for protecting fish and game, and also to town hall, market, and gas and water companies. House not in session.

The Apportionment bill was taken up, in the House, a resolution was adopted calling on the President for information on which he acted in exercising in the State of South Carolina the power conferred on him by the Ku-Klux act, with the names of all persons arrested and imprisoned; The Naval Committee reported a naval appropriation bill, asking for $17,943,347.

In the United States Senate on Friday the resolution for Congress to adjourn on the 29th of May was debated. Mr. Schurz moved, as a test question, an amendment that Congress shall not adjourn until the passage of a law for the reform of the civil service, which was rejected. Other amendments, that Congress shall not adjourn until the passage of the supplementary Civil Rights bill, or until the tariff laws have been amended to remove the duty on coal, were voted down. The resolution, after a long debate, was adopted by a "party" vote—the anti-Grant Republicans and Democrats (12) voting no, and the Administration Senators (36) voting yes. The vote on the apportionment will be taken to-day.

the House went into committee of the whole on the appropriation for general legislative purposes. Garfield and Sargent both denounced the extravagance of the Printing Department. After going over the whole of the bill the Pension Appropriation bill was taken up. The committee then rose and reported both bills to the House, which at once adopted them. The General Legislative bill calls for near $17,000,000, and the Pension bill for $30,480,000.

The U. S. Senate was not in session on Saturday. In the House, the day was devoted solely to speech making. Mr. Beck spoke at length against the Postal Telegraph scheme, and was replied to by Mr. Dawes.

The statement above shows the localities in which the most damage was sustained. A few dogs can do much harm, and why persons hesitate to kill a sheep killing dog is a query. For bridge contract in Locust township entered into in 1871, and which is about completed, Daniel Stine, contractor.
Real available fund then is	$7,225 57

The county has no debts, substantially. The orders are all paid that were issued in 1871.

57 per cent. of the county expenses this year have been for road damages and bridge building and repairs. Had the bridge contracted for in Locust township been paid it would have taken 62 per cent. of all money for these two items.

Bridges, of course, must be kept in repair and justice demands new ones to be built where public need requires. County bridges for individual use, merely, are occasionally asked for and by viewers granted; that, we think, a mistake.

Road damage is becoming quite noted, and we think that viewers sometimes look at the wrong side of the picture in assessing them.

We the undersigned Auditors of Columbia county, being duly elected to adjust and settle the accounts of the Treasurer and Commissioners of Columbia county do hereby certify that we met at the office of the Treasurer and commissioners, in Bloomsburg and carefully examined the accounts and vouchers of the same from the first day of January, A. D. 1871, to the first day of January, 1872 and find them correct in the foregoing statements and we find a balance due Columbia county on county tax, twenty six hundred and seventy three dollars and sixty-three cents ($2,673 63), from David Lowenberg, treasurer of said county and a balance due the Treasurer on Dog Tax of four hundred twenty nine dollars and twenty-one cents ($429 21) and, balance due the [illegible] by the Treasurer of three hundred and twelve dollars and seventy seven cents ($312 77.) And we further say that upon an examination of the accounts of the Treasurer, David Lowenberg, Esq., we find that they have been kept in a proper and correct manner and that his prompt official course has fully commended itself to the public. The above balance all paid over to Mr. Wm Lamon, Treasurer elect.

Given under our hands this second day of January, A. D. 1872.

If the public is satisfied that justice will be done by allowing the above Road damages to be paid by the county, then we will have nothing further to say. On the contrary, if any good reason is given why the same should not be allowed we will file exceptions to the same.

Road damage is growing quite popular, the question is now, is it always just. We fear it needs a check. We hope the people in the localities in which such damage now is or hereafter may be assessed, will give it due consideration, and if they think any such damage should not be allowed, we hope that they will enter their protest.

We will give this item for public benefit, from 1850 to 1865, a period of 16 years, Columbia county paid $3,692 12 Road damage. In 1871, one year only, it paid the snug sum of $6,280.

THE average salaries of male teachers ni Pennsylvania per month is $40 03; females, $31 12.

IT has been discovered that there is no law to punish a forgery of the frank of a member of Congress.

CAPT. M. WHITMOYER, of this town has been re-appointed Notary Public for three years, by Gov. Geary.

ANDREW TERWILLIGER has sold his farm near Light Street to Jacob Glawson for $3,400.

THE average snow storm of the period occurred on Sunday morning last. No cobwebs were removed from the sleighs however.

JOHN DAVIS, a brakeman on the L. & B. R. R., had his hand badly crushed on Monday last at this place, whilst engaged in coupling cars.

WILD CATS are unusually numerous this year and much bolder than usual in their approaches to human habitations. They do "murder most fowl."

JACOB M. GIRTON purchased the Essick Farm in Madison township, last week, at administrators sale, at nearly forty dollars per acre.

ROHR McHENRY has sold his Hotel property in Orangeville to John Eckrote, the landlord of the United States Hotel at Light Street, for $5000.

THE small-pox is raging to so great an extent at Mahanoy City, Schuylkill county, that the public schools have been, and the Churches and Sunday-Schools are to be closed.

TOWNSHIP officers are required by law to publish a statement of accounts. In Northumberland county recusants were recently fined $100 for two years' neglect and others $60 for one year's failure to discharge this duty.

ALEXIS carries the tail of the Buffalo, that he killed in his pocket as a trophy. —Ex.

The only thing that puzzles us in the above statement is, how the deuce the Buffalo got into his pocket to be killed.

REV. JOHN THOMAS of this town has purchased the upper farm of the late John Richards, adjoining lands of W. Grier Quick in Montour township, containing about 160 acres for $120 25 per acre.

WINTER asserted its presence in the most marked way on Sunday night last. The day had been pleasant but towards midnight a snow squall came followed by a rapid fall in the thermometer and in the morning every thing was frozen as stiff as a chip, which state of affairs still exists.

POSTMASTERS are required by law to notify the publishers of newspapers of the refusal of subscribers to take their papers from the office. Sending back the paper without giving the name of the office from which it is returned is not a legal notification. It would be well for them to bear this in mind.

WHISKEY seems to be in greater demand than ever, owing probably to the cold weather. A consumer of the fluid fell into the grasp of the law, as represented by Constable Woodward, on Monday night, but was released on promise of abstinence and good conduct.

A MAN named Davenport, who claims Beach Haven as a residence was arrested last week in Scranton having in his possession a stolen horse. He is also suspected of having been concerned in the Wisner murder. The Chief of Police believes him to be guilty.

AN entertainment was given by the Dramatic Association of Berwick on Wednesday night of last week. Three capital farces were acted and were received with appreciation by a very large audience. The receipts amounted to over $200. We understand that the Association will shortly give another entertainment.

CORRECTION.— In publishing the annual statement of the "Columbia County Mutual Saving Fund and Loan Association" last week, the total amount of Premiums was made to read $179 24. It should read $17,924 00. The total amount of loans was made to read $278 76. It should read $27,876 00.

A LOCAL paper having alluded to a street car railroad for Bloomsburg the neighboring journals are making merry over the suggestion. The latest hit comes from Riverside. For the benefit of most of our readers we would say that Riverside is a bit of Danville which has slopped over and got on the other side of the river.

WE fancy that most people at the beginning of a new year make the mistake of using the date of the one just ended. This is annoying of course, but it would seem that more disagreeable consequences may ensue if the following be taken as true. A gentleman, in a neighboring town, had a note discounted at bank recently, but the officers of the bank having discovered that the note was dated 1871 instead of 1872, put it to protest and the owner was obliged to pay the costs and execute another note. This is rather sharp practice, but is a warning to men doing business with financial institutions, to use the greatest care in drawing notes, under penalty of paying for their want of accuracy.

MAILS will be carried over the Danville, Hazleton & Wilkes Barre R. R., beginning on Monday, February 5th.

A DESTRUCTIVE fire occurred in Scranton, on Monday night destroying four frame buildings and damaging the post office building. Loss $50,000, about half insured.

PERSONS having Deeds and Mortgages lying in the Recorder's Office are requested to call and take them away. W. H. JACOBY, Bloomsburg, Feb. 2,'72-2t. Recorder.

CONSTABLE WOODWARD was around on Saturday night, to the discomfort of three individuals who had imbibed more whiskey than they could carry home. They were locked up for a short time and released on promise of leaving town immediately.

HON. WM. A. WALLACE, Chairman of the Democratic State Executive Committee has issued a call convening the Committee at Bolton's Hotel, Harrisburg, on Thursday, February 15th next, to fix the time and place of holding the State Convention.

THE ORANGEVILLE MUTUAL SAVING FUND AND LOAN ASSOCIATION.—At the last meeting on Monday evening, January 29th, three shares were loaned out at a premium of $73 and two at a premium of $79. Capt. H. J. Conner, Secretary; E. J. Ricketts, Pres't.

CONSTABLE WOODWARD made thirteen arrests for violations of the Town Ordinances in the month of January just past. All of these arrests were made for intoxication and disorderly conduct. He also arrested three persons on warrants issued by Justices.

TO-DAY, the 2nd of February, is popularly known as "Ground Hog Day" and upon the presence or absence of his shadow, are based predictions as to the character of the weather for the next month. We do not consider the ground hog a reliable barometer, at least of a prophetic kind.

THE administrators of Jacob Kostenbader deceased, sold two tracts of land late of the decedent, on Friday last—one to John Vought, jr., and one to Mrs. Margaret Kostenbader. This disposes of all the real estate except the mansion farm, of two hundred and fifty acres, which still remains unsold.

THE Public School authorities of Northumberland opened a splendid building, erected for educational purposes on the 25th of January last. The Rev. Mr. Hewitt of Bloomsburg, delivered a lecture upon the occasion, which has received with great satisfaction by the large audience.

SEVERAL persons residing at Schock's Mills on the Susquehanna, near Columbia, cut the ice from a deep place in the canal and caught with their hands over a thousand fishes. Among the lot were over twenty rock and between thirty and forty salmon. One of the latter weighed seven and a half pounds.

SEVEN young men of Muncy have been arrested on the charge of being the incendiaries who started the recent fires in that place. Their names are Washington Geise, Pierce Crawford, Jacob Rickold, Hope Walton, William Mitchell, John Geise and Isaiah Butler, all of whom were committed to jail for trial by Justice Rankin.

Four of them have been convicted.

ON Monday as one of our citizens was passing near the L. & B. R. R., station, he saw a man curled up on a hand car on the side of the road, evidently purposing to sleep. The gentleman knowing that the intense cold would prove too much for the sleeper had him removed to the station where he was thoroughly warmed. He would undoubtedly have frozen in an hour's time. Whiskey was the cause of the somnolency.

IN the matter of personal adornment the ingenuity of "fair women" knows no bounds. The latest plan which they have adopted is to paint the skin near the corners of the eyes shading off in the direction of the ears. This we are told gives a "languishing softness" to the face calculated to subdue the most obdurate heart of man.

"She was all my fancy painted her," &c.

Has Bloomsburg attained to this triumph of art?

THE Raftman's Journal publishes a long poem under the head of "original poetry—for the Journal." The editor of the COLUMBIAN has had in his possession the manuscript of that poem for more than twenty years. As this dates back some years before the publication of the Journal was begun, it is difficult to see how it could have been written especially for it, unless the editor accumulated enough matter beforehand to keep his paper going for some time after starting.

COLUMBIA County foxes have been hunted sufficiently to make them capable of looking out for themselves, but we doubt if any of them could have done a shrewder thing than one of their kind did in Chester county a few days ago. He was hard pressed and running to the railroad just as a train was passing darted in front of the engine. The hounds followed him but the engine cut into the pack killing and wounding the greater part whilst the fox made good his escape.

IT is more than probable that numerous marriages, or at least postponements of them, have resulted from the want of snow this winter. A sleigh ride has brought forth many a proposal from bashful lovers, who, under the mingled excitements of moonlight, sleigh bells and the bright eyes of their lady loves have grown reckless and asked the momentous question which months of parlor communion would not have drawn out. When we consider that this is also leap year, we sigh to think of the many swains languishing in their sweet torments and disquieting themselves with longings for an old fashioned storm.

WE publish in another part of the COLUMBIAN the annual Statement of the County Commissioners and report of the County Treasurer to which we call public attention.

SOME irreverent chap has been poking fun at the venerable editor of the Williamsport Standard and tells how he sent a reporter on the wings of the wind to get full particulars of an accident, "a horse had fallen on a boy." The reporter arrived at the scene of the disaster and ascertained that the horse was a "hobby" one and smaller than the boy! There should be a law passed making it a penal offence to chaff an editor.

THE pleasure of living in a quiet well behaved town like Bloomsburg is increased by reading of the perfect carnival of crime which prevails in the large cities. The New York papers of Monday contain accounts of a suicide, an attempt at suicide, a brutal murder of a son by his father, a murder for no known reason and a half dozen highway robberies. In view of these facts we are willing to forego the pleasures of city life, and take the greater security which the country affords.

THE Benton Saving Fund Association went into operation on last Tuesday, when 321 shares were paid in at $2.00 per share. The money sold at ninety-six, premium thereby increasing the value of the shares to $3.76. Stock can be taken at the first cost until the last Tuesday of February, inst., after which time the premium will be charged. Any persons in town desiring to take stock or borrow money can have their business attended to as conveniently and more profitably than if the Association were located at Bloomsburg, by calling at the office of E. H. Little, one of the Directors.

THERE has been invented lately a patent air brake for railroad cars which, if report speak true, we trust will not be introduced on any road connecting with Bloom. An exchange states that a man tried this brake on the inclined plane near Mauch Chunk. He let the car go until it was traveling at the rate of sixty miles an hour and then applied the brake. The car stopped instanter, but the man kept right on, head foremost, at a rather accelerated rate of speed, and brought up in a thicket of underbrush. His friends having collected him and put him together, took him home on a board. This brake might be used on passenger trains if travelers were securely fastened to their seats by log chains or other simple arguments against flight.

WHEN business is dull, go to work and make business. It is no way to sit down and complain of hard times. Keep stirring. If everybody sat down and waited for better times they never would come till doomsday. If a million people make a little extra effort to realize their desires in business, hard times, give way to their efforts, like an ice dam before a flood and currents of business set in fresh once more. It is the same in a small way with each single individual. Don't help to block the wheels of business by keeping still. Hard times is but another name for stagnation of business, and there is no way to make a stagnant pool fresh, except to stir it. If you try to infuse life into your business, your neighbor will follow your example, and you will be surprised to see how much you can do to keep business going. Activity is life, stagnation is death.

GOSSIP WITH OUR READERS.

A good, honest, cheery laugh is a most desirable possession and is in most cases, a fair index to the character of its owner. There is no one thing in which men differ more widely, and to any one who will take the trouble, the study of the differences will prove instructive and amusing. A noisy laugh is not necessarily a good one. Some men roar in their merriment, heartily enough, but with no more music in their outbursts, than there is in the shriek of a steam whistle. This kind of laughter is disagreeable; not even its evident honesty can compensate for the strain on the nervous system which it inevitably causes. A really good laughter is rare, that is, one who combines all the excellencies with none or few of the defects. We have a friend who is perfect in this respect or as near as may be. It's worth your while to tell him a humorous story just to hear his glorious laugh; to watch his gradually expanding countenance; to hear the premonitory ripple of mirth culminating at last in the rich, musical, ha, ha, ha, which comes from his very heart and permeates his frame. We have on sundry and distinct occasions broken the Tenth Commandment shockingly whilst listening to him. No man with a generous soul could fail to be carried away by his contagious merriment. Old stories under the influence of his enjoyment of them, become as new and afford the teller more satisfaction than when heard for the first time. You would naturally trust such a man, his laugh is a perpetual credential for honor and honesty. He could not steal, if he tried, unless he changed his cachinnatory style. How different from the feeble efforts with which some men try to express amusement, using laughter as if it were a dutiable article and they could not afford to pay the tariff. Such are "fit for treason, stratagem and spoils." We do not believe history can produce a first class rascal who laughed well—not loudly and uproariously—but musically and heartily. Education can affect, to a great extent, an unpleasant laugh, refinement will tone down a noisy one and constant watchfulness and care will make a better out of a bad one, but a perfect laugh, is "born not made" and cannot be attained. Happy is he who is blessed therewith, for his welcome is always sure among his fellows.

THE house and lot of Dr. John, now occupied by D. A. Beckley, is offered for sale on reasonable terms. It is one of the most desirable and pleasantly located properties in Bloomsburg.

Finances.

The reading furnished by the Legislature of Pennsylvania, is not of the most entertaining or eloquent description, but perhaps the most interesting is the annual report of the Auditor General. We proceed to state as nearly as we can get at it, what Columbia county pays into the State Treasury, and what she gets out:

Tax on dividends	$ 211 61
First National Bank	475 00

" " Retailers "	1,295 37
" " Eating H. "	266 00
" " Millers "	133 48
	$8,962 67

In addition to the above, very large sums are paid by the Catawissa Rail Road, and by the Lackawanna & Bloomsburg Rail Road, but the proportion paid by Columbia county is not ascertainable. Some other items may possibly be included in some gross sums. So too in the credit side, the amount paid out to the Senate doorkeeper is not separately set out. But the credit side shows that we have got back the following amounts:

C. R. Buckalew's salary	$1,000 00
" " " select com.	300 00
Pensions and gratuities	500 00
Common Schools	3,585 96

THE PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL has began the year well. In no other periodical do we find human nature so thoroughly treated. We always see something in it which instructs us, something which entertains and something amusing. It is a capital family magazine. In the February number we find illustrated articles, and sketches of merit. Price 30 cents, single Nos.; $3 a year, S. R. Wells, New York.

BROWN & JONES.—Who are they—They are an enterprising young firm lately established in Catawissa and from the asonishing amount of Dry Goods they sell it evident that the people are attracted by their low prices. They are in constant receipt of fresh goods from New York. They sell only for cash, giving the buyer every possible advantage derived from this plan. A visit to their store will convince the reader of these facts. nd tf.

IS THE STOMACH A SEWER.—That it should be deluged with all sorts of disgusting potions? A weak digestion may be paralyzed past all hope by such dosing. Use a rational discrimination. The experience of a third of a century has proved that Hoofland's German Bitters and German Tonic exercise a controlling influence in cases of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Nervousness, and General debility, which belongs to no other medicine in existence. If a brisk stimulant is required, the Tonic is preferable; but if the invalid is of a full habit, the Bitters should be taken. Sold by all Druggists.

MANY people, particularly children suffer with the care ache: and for the, benefit of such we give a sure but simple remedy. Put in two or three drops of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, stop the ear with undressed wool, bathe the feet in warm water before going to bed, and keep the head warm at night.

Capt. Charles Sager, who keeps a superb stock of livery horses in Portland Me., informed us recently that he uses Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders regularly in his stables, and that the expense is more than offset by the diminished amount of grain necessary to keep his horses always in good order.

SINKING SLOWLY.—Diseases that progress rapidly to a crisis are not the only ones to be dreaded. Canker or dry rot does not blast a tree as suddenly as a stroke of lightning, but unless arrested it destroys it as certainly; and in like manner chronic debility, although it does not kill with the swiftness of yellow fever, is as sure to sap the springs of life eventually as any acute disease, if not checked by invigorating medication. There is something inexpressibly touching in the spectacle of premature decay. Languor, pallor, emaciation, depression of spirits, and a distaste for exertion, are its ordinary symptoms, and they should be promptly met by tonic treatment. The best invigorant and exhilarant that can be administered in a case of this kind is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The stimulating principle of the preparation rouses the dormant energies of the system, and the strengthening and regulating properties give a permanent and healthful impulse to the vital forces thus brought into play. The failing appetite is reawakened, the processes of digestion and assimilation are quickened, the quality of the blood is improved, the secretions become more natural, and every organ that contributes to the nourishment of the body undergoes salutary change. By these means the repair of the physical structure is effected and its health and vigor restored. In no class of diseases has the beneficent operation of the Bitters been more marked and striking than in those characterized by general debility and nervous prostration. Ladies affected with these ailments find in this most wholesome of all tonics and correctives the safest and surest means of relief. It is strong to restore and powerless to injure. Such is the uniform testimony of "clouds of witnesses."

Whipping Horses.

There are persons who think that the spirit and temper of a horse must be broken to make him valuable. Prof. Wagner, in his work on the "Education of Horses," says:

"I would caution those who train or use horses against exciting the ill-will of the animal. Many think they are doing finely, and are proud of their success in horse-training, by means of severe whipping, or otherwise rousing and stimulating the passions, and then, from necessity, crushing the will, through which the resistance is prompted. No mistake can be greater than this; and there is nothing that so fully exhibits the ability, judgment and skill of the real horseman as the care and tact displayed in winning instead of repelling the action of the mind.—Although it may be necessary to use the whip sometimes, it should always be applied judiciously, and great care should be taken not to rouse the passions or excite the will to obstinacy.

"The legitimate and proper use of the whip is calculated to operate upon the sense of fear almost entirely. The affections and better nature must be appealed to in training a horse as well as in training a child. A reproof given may be intended for the good of the child, but, if only the passions are excited, the effect is depraving and injurious. This is a vital principle, and can be disregarded in the management of sensitive, courageous horses only at the imminent risk of spoiling them. I have known many horses of naturally gentle character to be spoiled by being whipped once, and one horse that was made vicious by being struck with a whip once while standing in his stall.

"I have referred to these instances to show the danger of rough treatment, and the effect that may easily be produced by ill usage, especially with fine blood horses and those of a highly nervous temperament. Many other cases might be cited, as such are by no means uncommon. Sensitive horses should never be left after they have been excited by the whip or other means, until calmed down by rubbing or patting the head and neck, and giving apples, sugar, or something of which the animal is fond. Remember, the whip must be used with great care, or it is liable to do mischief, and many cause irreparable injury."

Treatment of Wounds in Horses and Cattle.

Many permanent blemishes which depreciate the value of horses might be prevented by careful attention as soon as the injury is inflicted. Broken skin on the knee may sometimes, for want of proper treatment, result in an ugly scar, which will reduce the selling value of a horse one-fourth or more. In farmers' stables horses are often permitted to get loose, and the consequence is that some morning the owner finds one of his animals badly kicked. A wound made by the sharpened calks of a horse shoe in Winter time is a very ugly looking one, and needs some little surgery to dress so as to avoid a bad blemish; and yet it may be done by the use of such skill as is at the command of any one who can dress a cut of his own finger. In the first place, whenever an injury is inflicted, it should be attended to at once, or with as little delay as possible. If any dirt is in the wound, it should be well cleansed with a soft sponge and luke-warm water. Then with a proper needle (a curved surgeon's needle should be used) and stout silk twist, pass as many stitches through the edges of the wound as will draw them and hold them together.—These stitches should not be made as in sewing cloth, but the thread is to be passed through the skin at points directly opposite to each other. The two ends of the thread should be tied into a secure knot after drawing the edges of the wound closely together. If the edges are ragged, some care must be exercised to bring the corresponding parts into their proper place. If swelling takes place, apply cold water until it is reduced, and avoid all irritating or spirituous applications unless they become necessary. Nature will generally perform the cure if assisted to make a proper start. If the wound should not seem inclined to heal, and a stimulating application becomes necessary, the following ointment has been fonnd of great benefit: To one pound of hog's lard take a quarter of a pint of spirits of turpentine and an ounce of blue vitriol (sulphate of copper), powder the blue vitriol very fine, melt the lard, and stir in the other ingredients, until cool; apply a sufficient quantity to the wound. A healthy action will soon ensue.—Canada Farmer.

Feeding Nettles to Laying Hens.

The Vienna Agricultural and Forest Journal states that hens fed in the Winter with chopped and boiled nettle leaves, or with the seeds, and kept in a warm place, will continue to lay during the entire Winter. The experiment was first suggested by noticing the eagerness with which both domestic and wild fowl devour the nettle leaves and seeds whenever the opportunity is afforded. This proclivity is believed to be the reason why, with the enormous yield of seeds on the part of the the nettle, comparatively so few plants spring. It is stated also that in Denmark the seeds and leaves of the nettle are fed very carefully to horses, after having been collected, dried and ground; three times a week, morning and evening, a handful of this nettle dust is mixed with the oats, in consequence of which the horses are said to become fleshy and sleek, and their hair to grow unusually long, and to assume a remarkably beautiful, silky luster.

SHALLOW VS. DEEP PANS.—Thomas J. Edge, of Chester county, writes to the Practical Farmer that he has tried the effect of setting the milk in deep and shallow pans. He used equal quantities of milk, and the result was a yield of about one-third more cream from that placed in deep vessels. The cream in the shallow pans was somewhat thicker, and that from the deep cans became sour sooner than the other. He had always before used the shallow pans, but is now convinced that the deep ones are the best. Besides the increased yield of cream, their use saves much room and labor. In the upper or German townships of Bucks county, the use of deep pans for setting milk is almost universal. The stranger passing along the road is often struck with the number of deep earthen pots hung on the pale fences in front of the dwellings—so different from the shallow vessels generally used elsewhere.

Young Folks.

A Fairy Story.

A poor woman had a wonderful chair. It was not of gold, or set with precious stones, nor did it even possess a velvet cushion; but it had such a wonderful property that it could tell, if asked, all that had been said by the person who sat last in it, and the woman valued it more than she would have done a castle.

It happened, one day, the king was hunting in the forest where the poor woman lived, and, being weary, went into her cottage. When he had sat there a while, he asked the woman who lived in the tower on the edge of the wood.

"Indeed, now," answered the woman, "I cannot tell, though Dame Martin York was telling me but yesterday. She said it was the Marquis of—Marquis of—Chair, what was it that Dame Martin said?"

"She said that the Marquis of Mistletoe lived there," answered the chair, at once.

"You have a remarkable chair there," said the king; "how does it happen that a chair can talk?"

"It was not the chair, your majesty," said the woman, frightened at having told her secret. "I answered myself."

"Why, then, did you call on the chair?" asked the king.

"Oh, that is a foolish way I have of talking," returned the woman.

"Will you sell me the chair?" asked the king, again.

"Oh, your majesty, I dare not," said he woman. "It was my great-great-great-great grand-father's chair; and when dying, he declared that if the chair ever went out of the family, all our luck would go with it."

Of course the king did not believe a word of this; and when the woman went out of the room, he sat down in the chair and said:

"Intery, mintery, cutery, corn.' Then getting up he asked the chair, "Chair, what did I say just now?"

"Intery, mintery, cutery, corn," answered the chair, at once.

So the king, being sure that the chair could talk, went away; but the next day he came with his officers of the court, and said to the woman.

"Will you sell me your great-great-great-grandfather's chair to day?"

"Alas!" said the woman, "I have told your majesty that I cannot."

"Chair," asked the king, "what did the last person who sat down in you say?"

"Oh, what a great fool the king is!" replied the chair.

"It is not true. I said nothing of the sort!" cried the woman.

"It is true," said the king, "and you shall go to prison for it. For the chair, I will take care of it myself."

And so he had it brought home to his place, and placed it in his receiving-room.

No one thought anything about the chair, it was such a plain affair; but it also looked so comfortable, that nearly every one sat down in it. So the king observed who sat in it last, and shutting all the doors, asked the chair:

"Chair, what did the Lord High Fiddlesticks say, when he whispered to the Dame of the Powder-closet?"

"He said that your majesty was a greater simpleton than ever," answered the chair.

"I don't believe it!" cried the king, very angry; but, of course, the chair had nothing to say to that.

The king, who had always thought himself the wisest of men, could not forget what the chair had said. He was also just as anxious to know why it was that the Lord High Fiddlesticks thought him such a simpleton. He tried to remember what silly things he had done; but, on looking back, all his actions seemed to him remarkably clever. In short, he so tormented himself that he did not get a wink of sleep that night. The next day it happened that a beautiful princess, whom the king desired to marry, sat down in the chair, and sat there a long time, and, of course, the king was even more anxious than before to hear what the chair had to say.

"She said," answered the chair, "that she really must go home, for that you gave her no peace, but worried her continually, by trying to make love to her."

"I do not believe it!" roared the king; "I do not believe it!" but of course, the chair was mum, as before.

The next day, the princess happened to sit in the chair again, and the king was just as anxious to know what she had said as before.

"She said," answered the chair, "that she was ready to die of laughing whenever she saw you; that you had the grace of an elephant and the politeness of a bear; and she only wished that you could see, yourself, how stupid and disagreeable you seemed to others!"

The king was so afflicted to hear this that he forgot even to be angry; but seeing, a few days after, his best and dearest friend seat himself, he came once more to ask the chair what had been said.

"He said," answered the chair, "that you were a tyrant; that you had reigned too long, and your people were tired of you, and that he would soon take your crown away from you."

"I do not believe it," called out the king, but the chair was mum, as before.

Then the king flew into a violent rage.

"Miserable thing!" he said to the chair, "you have made me unhappy for the whole of my life."

And, seizing a hammer, he broke the chair into bits, and threw the pieces into the fire, so that the chair was of little service, after all.

BACKBITING.—The longer I live, the more I feel the importance of adhering to the following rules, which I have laid down for myself in such matters:

1. To hear as little as possible what is to the prejudice of others.
2. To believe nothing of the kind until I am absolutely forced to.
3. Never to drink in the spirit of one who circulates an ill report.
4. Always to moderate as far as I can, the unkindness which is expressed towards others.
5. Always to believe that, if the other side were heard, a very different account would be given of the matter.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS.

A Bitters without Alcohol or Spirits of any kind,

Is different from all others. It is composed of the pure Juices, or Vital Principle of Roots, Herbs, and Barks, (or as medicinally termed Extracts,) the worthless or inert portions of the ingredients not being used. Therefore in one Bottle of this Bitters there is contained as much medicinal virtue as will be found in several gallons of ordinary mixtures. The Roots, &c., used in this Bitters are grown in Germany, their vital principles extracted in that country by a scientific Chemist, and forwarded to the manufactory in this city, where they are compounded and bottled. Containing no spirituous ingredients, this Bitters is free from the objections urged against all others: no desire for stimulants can be induced from their use, they cannot make drunkards, and cannot under any circumstances, have any but a beneficial effect.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN TONIC,

Was compounded for those not inclined to extreme bitters, and is intended for use in cases when some alcoholic stimulant is required in connection with the Tonic properties of the Bitters. Each bottle of the Tonic contains one bottle of the Bitters, combined with pure SANTA CRUZ RUM, and flavored in such a manner that the extreme bitterness of the bitters is overcome, forming a preparation highly agreeable and pleasant to the palate, and containing the medicinal virtues of the Bitters. The price of the Tonic is $1.50 per Bottle, which many persons think too high. They must take into consideration that the stimulant used is guaranteed to be of a pure quality. A poor article could be furnished at a cheaper price, but is it not better to pay a little more and have a good article? A medicinal preparation should contain none but the best ingredients; and they who expect to obtain a cheap compound, and be benefitted by it will most certainly be cheated.

Who would ask for more Dignified and Stronger Testimony?

Hon. GEORGE W. WOODWARD, former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, a present Member of Congress from Pennsylvania writes:

PHILADELPHIA, March 16th, 1867.

I find "Hoofland's German Bitters" is a good tonic, useful in diseases of the digestive organs, and of great benefit in cases of debility and want of action in the system. Yours truly
GEORGE W. WOODWARD.

Hon. JAMES THOMSON, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, April 28, 1867.

I consider "Hoofland's German Bitters" a valuable medicine in case of attacks of Indigestion or Dyspepsia. I can certify this from my experience of it. Yours, with respect,
JAMES THOMSON.

Hon. GEORGE SHARSWOOD, Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, June 1, 1868.

I have found by experience that "Hoofland's German Bitters" is a very good tonic, relieving dyspeptic symptoms almost directly.
GEORGE SHARSWOOD.

Hon. WM. F. ROGERS, Mayor of the City of Buffalo, N. Y.

Mayor's Office, Buffalo, June 22, 1869.

I have used "Hooflands German Bitters and Tonic" in my family during the past year, and can recommend them as an excellent tonic, imparting tone and vigor to the system. Their use has been productive of decidedly beneficial effects.
WM. F. ROGERS.

Hon. JAMES M. WOOD, Ex-Mayor of Williamsport Pa.

I take great pleasure in recommending "Hoofland's German Tonic" to any one who may be afflicted with Dyspepsia. I had the Dyspepsia so badly it was impossible to keep my food in my stomach, and I became so weak as not to be able to walk half a mile. Two bottles of Tonic effected a perfect cure.

DR. HOOFLAND'S
PODOPHYLLIN, OR
SUBSTITUTE FOR MERCURY PILLS.
TWO PILLS A DOSE.
The most Powerful, Yet Innocent, Vegetable Cathartic known.

It is not necessary to take a handful of these Pills to produce the desired effect; two of them act quickly and powerfully, cleansing the Liver, Stomach and Bowels of all impurities. The principle ingredient is Podophyllin, or the Alcoholic Extract of Mandrake, which is by many times more powerful, acting and searching than the Mandrake itself. Its peculiar action is upon the Liver, cleaning it speedily from all obstructions, with all the power of Mercury, yet free from the injurious results attached to the use of that mineral.

For all diseases in which the use of a cathartic is indicated, these pills will give entire satisfaction in every case. They NEVER FAIL.

In cases of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia and extreme costiveness, Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters or Tonic should be used in connection with the Pills. The tonic effect of the Bitters or Tonic builds up the system. The Bitters or Tonic purifies the Blood, strengthens the Nerves, REGULATES the Liver, and gives strength, energy and vigor.

Keep your Bowels active with the Pills, and tone up the system with Bitters or Tonic, and no disease can retain the hold, or even assail you.

Recollect that it is DR. HOOFLAND'S GERMAN Remedies that are so universally used and highly recommended; and do not allow the Druggist to induce you to take anything that he may say is just as good, because he makes a larger profit on it.

These Remedies will be sent by express to any locality, upon application to the PRINCIPAL OFFICE, at the GERMAN MEDICINE STORE, 631 Arch St., Philadelphia.

Drugs and Chemicals.

THE CAUSE AND CURE OF CONSUMPTION.

The primary cause of Consumption is derangement of the digestive organs. This derangement produces deficient nutrition and assimilation. By assimilation I mean that process by which the nutriment of the food is converted into blood, and thence into the solids of the body. Persons with digestion thus impaired, having the slightest predisposition to pulmonary disease, or if they take cold, will be very liable to have Consumption of the Lungs in some of its forms; and I hold that it will be impossible to cure any case of Consumption without first restoring a good digestion and healthy assimilation. The very first thing to be done is to cleanse the stomach and bowels from all diseased mucus and slime, which is clogging these organs so that they cannot perform their functions, and then rouse up and restore the liver to a healthy action. For this purpose the surest and best remedy is Schenck's Mandrake Pills. These Pills clean the stomach and bowels of all the dead and morbid slime that is causing disease and decay in the whole system. They will clear out the liver of all diseased bile that has accumulated there, and rouse it up to a new and healthy action, by which natural and healthy bile is secreted.

The stomach, bowels, and liver are thus cleansed by the use of Schenck's Mandrake Pills; but there remains in the stomach an excess of acid, the organ is torpid and the appetite poor. In the bowels the lacteals are weak, and requiring strength and support. It is in a condition like this that Schenck's Seaweed Tonic proves to be the most valuable remedy ever discovered. It is alkaline, and its use will neutralize all excess of acid, making the stomach sweet and fresh; it will give permanent tone to this important organ, and create a good, hearty appetite, and prepare the system for the first process of a good digestion, and ultimately make good, healthy, living blood. After this preparatory treatment, what remains to cure most cases of Consumption is the free and persevering use of Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup. The Pulmonic Syrup nourishes the system, purifies the blood, and is readily absorbed into the circulation, and thence distributed to the diseased lungs. There it ripens all morbid matters, whether in the form of abscesses or tubercles, and then assists Nature to expel all the diseased matter, in the form of free expectoration, when once it ripens. It is then, by the great healing and purifying properties of Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, that all ulcers and cavities are healed up sound, and my patient is cured.

The essential thing to be done in curing Consumption is to get up a good appetite and a good digestion, so that the body will grow in flesh and get strong. If a person has diseased lungs,—a cavity or abscess there,—the cavity cannot heal, the matter cannot ripen, so long as the system is below par. What is necessary to cure is a new order of things,—a good appetite, a good nutrition, the body to grow in flesh and get fat; then Nature is helped, the cavities will heal, the matter will ripen and be thrown off in large quantities, and the person regain health and strength. This is the true and only plan to cure Consumption, and if a person is very bad, if the lungs are not entirely destroyed, or even if one lung is entirely gone, if there is enough vitality left in the other to heal up, there is hope.

I have seen many persons cured with only one sound lung, live and enjoy life to a good old age. This is what Schenck's Medicines will do to cure Consumption. They will clean out the stomach, sweeten and strengthen it, get up a good digestion, and give Nature the assistance she needs to clear the system of all the disease that is in the lungs, whatever the form may be.

It is important that while using Schenck's Medicines, care should be exercised not to take cold; keep in-doors in cold and damp weather; avoid night air, and take out-door exercise only in a genial and warm sunshine.

I wish it distinctly understood that when I recommend a patient to be careful in regard to taking cold, while using my Medicines, I do so for a special reason. A man who has but partially recovered from the effects of a bad cold is far more liable to a relapse than one who has been entirely cured; and it is precisely the same in regard to Consumption. So long as the lungs are not perfectly healed, just so long is there imminent danger of a full return of the disease. Hence it is that I so strenuously caution pulmonary patients against exposing themselves to an atmosphere that is not genial and pleasant. Confirmed Consumptives' lungs are a mass of sores, which the least change of atmosphere will inflame. The grand secret of my success with my Medicines consists in my ability to subdue inflammation instead of provoking it, as many of the faculty do. An inflamed lung cannot, with safety to the patient, be exposed to the biting blasts of Winter or the chilling winds of Spring or Autumn. It should be carefully shielded from all irritating influences. The utmost caution should be observed in this particular, as without it a cure under almost any circumstances is an impossibility.

The person should be kept on a wholesome and nutritious diet, and all the Medicines continued until the body has restored to it the natural quantity of flesh and strength.

I was myself cured by this treatment of the worst kind of Consumption, and have lived to get fat and hearty these many years, with one lung mostly gone. I have cured thousands since and very many have been cured by this treatment whom I have never seen.

About the First of October I expect to take possession of my new building, at the Northeast Corner of Sixth and Arch streets, where I shall be pleased to give advice to all who may require it.

Full directions accompany all my Remedies, so that a person in any part of the world can be readily cured by a strict observance of the same.

Dr. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA
VINEGAR BITTERS
Hundreds of Thousands
Bear testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.
WHAT ARE THEY?

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, whether in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal. Send for a circular.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

THEY ARE NOT A VILE
FANCY DRINK.

Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell.

$100 will be given for an incurable case, provided the bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid liver and bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effect.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

PIN, TAPE and other WORMS, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. For full directions, read carefully the circular around each bottle, printed in four languages—English, German, French and Spanish.

These Pills are the most delightfully pleasant purgative, superseding castor oil, salts, magnesia, etc. There is nothing more acceptable to the stomach. They give tone, and cause neither nausea nor griping pains. They are composed of the finest ingredients. After a few days' use of them, such an invigoration of the entire system takes place as to appear miraculous to the weak and enervated, whether arising from imprudence or disease. H. T. Helmbold's Compound Fluid Extract Catawba Grape Pills are not sugar coated, from the fact that sugar-coated Pills do not dissolve, but pass through the stomach without dissolving, consequently do not produce the desired effect.
